Dear Scholarly Readers,

Warm Greetings!

In the recent days, the health service delivery system across the globe revolves around and is focused on the Covid-19 pandemic with equitable emphasis both on cure and prevention. National Medical College Teaching Hospital has shouldered the truthful and efficient responsibility at its level best to tackle this fatal pandemic scenario in Nepal in general and the Terai belt in particular. The health professional and other associated administrative staff of this institution has manifested their highly enthusiastic professional obligations and job performance during this panic but challenging situation. The hospital management has left no stone unturned to ensure that all doctors, nursing personnel and other supportive staff are provided with the most effective measures for self protection while discharging their respective duties in patient care

In spite of the panics and concerns regarding the Covid-19 pandemic, life can not come to a complete halt. Our institution is not an exception to this reality. Along with health services, academic and research activities must have to continue even in such a disaster situation. Owing to this realization, the editorial board of the official medical journal of our institution (MED PHOENIX) decided to publish the next edition in due time. I have this great honour and pleasure to share with our readers the fifth volume (2020) of MED PHOENIX with wide variety of high standard research articles and case reports relevant to the areas of facts in Health and therapeutic Sciences. Publication of this present volume of MED PHOENIX would not have been possible without the invariable support and tireless efforts from all members of the Editorial Board, and above all the Executive Editor as well as the panel of reviewers. Also, my sincere thanks to all the authors from Nepal and abroad, who all contributed to the success of this track with their effort of quality research and full trust.

I look forward to work with them for continuous growth and success of this journal. As the Editor-in-chief, I have enough self-assurance that our readers will be benefited from the research articles and they can update their acquaintance in the field of current advances in Health Science aspects.

With best wishes & regard.

Prof. Dr. Jainuddin Ansari
